

riskrewardpdx Joni Renee Whitworth's work Self Defense speaks to how Joni (as an artist living with autism) navigates being in public, being employed, and being in relationship with family, friends, in love, and more. Through this piece, her engagement with nature, and man-made systems and structures, shed light on cultural issues of exclusion. See her work in person June 28-30 at Imago Theatre for the Risk/Reward Festival of New Performance!

Pay-What-You-Can tickets are available in advance for this year's festival. What does "Pay-What-You-Can" mean? It means you decide what you can afford to pay for seeing these regional performing artists do their thing.

Our suggested ticket price is $20 -- can't afford that? Pay less. Or, if you can, pay more than $20! A $40 ticket gets you a reserved seat, and $100 gets you free concessions all night long!

Each day the festival includes the same five new works, performed back-to-back over a 2-hour extravaganza with short breaks and one intermission. Beer, wine, and snacks available for purchase.
